| 8. Mary | m. 1706, Robert Jordan, 2nd son of Rev. Robert Jordan, pioneer minister of Richmond Island. |

James Tobey was in Kittery in the District of Maine at a very early day, probably as early as 1665. The earliest date that a grant of land was made to him was June 4, 1687, but there is a record in the county court of 1669 of a witness in the case of Mary Green, named Katherine Tobey. Mr. Stackpole in his History of Kittery suggests that this may have been the first wife of James Tobey.

Some of his children were of age in 1688 which would carry the date of his birth back to about 1640.

His social position may be shown by the term "Yeoman" used in his deed of land to his sons. He belonged to the great middle class of Englishmen. He was unquestionably a native of England.

In one of the most savage of the Indian raids the diary of Pike tells us that old James Tobey of Kittery and his son James were killed in 1705.

The deed of James Tobey with much other data appears in the Tobey genealogy.

“Richard Tobie was the first of the Kittery family to sign his name TOBIE.

Richard Tobie of Seabrook, N. H. yeoman and Jemima his wife sold for $200.00 to Jemima, wife of Edward Melcher of Kensington, N. H. land on the highway of Kensington, Nov. 4, 1788.

Richard Tobie of New Gloucester, Massachusetts Bay, gentlemen, sold to Williard Emery of Hampton Town, N. H. for £6, four acres in Hampton Town.”

—Obituary—

“Died in New Gloucester, Maine, Oct. 8, 1827, Mr. Richard Tobie. At the commencement of the Revolutionary War the deceased was appointed an officer under the Continental Congress, which office he sustained until a short time before the close of the War when he relinquished it and was chosen a lieutenant in a volunteer company. Shortly after this the news of peace came, and they did not leave the town of Hampton Falls, N. H.

In 1789 he removed to New Gloucester, Me. where by industry and frugality he acquired a valuable property. In 1799 he was baptized and joined the Baptist church in the town of which he was a worthy and exemplary member till the time of his death. He was kind and affectionate in his family and beloved by all who knew him. He retained his reason till the last and would discourse upon events which took place sixty or seventy years ago with surprising accuracy. His memory was strong and retentive. His descendents were thirteen children, sixty nine grandchildren, and twenty four great grandchildren, in all one hundred and six, ninety one of which were living at the time of his death."

Luther and Nathaniel Pratt, brothers, were of Middleborough, Mass. and were early settlers in the western part of Paris, Maine.

The History of Paris, Maine says that Phineas and Joshua Pratt came to Plymouth in the third Pilgrim Ship "Ann," and were among the forefathers at Plymouth, and probably the ancestors of most of the name in the colony.

The ancestor of Nathaniel⁶, however, was Mathew Pratt and not one of these two.

ROBERTS

From the Boston Sunday Globe of Sept. 9, 1928.

ROBERTS FARM FOR 300 YEARS PASSED FROM FATHER TO SON.

ALMOST THE FIRST SETTLED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE, CLAIM IS MADE FOR IT OF HOLDING RECORD IN AMERICA FOR CONTINUOUS FAMILY POSSESSION.

DOVER, N. H.—New Hampshire believes it is justified in claiming to have within its borders the oldest farm in the United States—oldest in the sense of having been owned, occupied and tilled as a family possession continuously from its beginning. This is the "Governor Thomas Roberts Farm" at Dover Neck. It dates from almost the beginning of the white men's settlement of New Hampshire territory.

Dover Neck is that narrow tongue of land between the Piscataqua on the East and the Bellamy or Black River on the West and sloping gently southward to the confluences of the rivers and Great Bay at Dover Point.

Here in the spring of 1623, New Hampshire had its beginning in the little settlement formed there by Edward Hilton, William Hilton, Thomas Roberts and a few others whose names, if ever recorded, have been lost in the lapse of centuries.

The Roberts farm's claim to the hoary age of three centuries of uninterrupted family ownership and occupancy is based on available colonial and family records, more or less fragmentary, but authentic and supporting the local tradition.

While its exact age as a family possession is not known owing to the disappearance of the record of its acquisition by the pioneer, Thomas Roberts, other historical data point to the probability that it was acquired by Roberts in 1628 when the land became available under the David Thomson grant, as will be explained.

It is possible, however, that Roberts did not come into possession of it until 1631, the year that Edward Hilton received a special grant from the Council of Plymouth, Eng., called the Swamscot patent, confirming and defining the bounds of the territory he had acquired under Thomson's grant of 6000 acres in 1622.

It may reasonably be presumed that the quest for the country's oldest farm will have to end here. Fred H. Roberts, its present owner, eighth in descent from Governor Roberts, who was the last Governor or Chief Magistrate of the Dover Colony, before it came under the rule of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1642, thinks it must end here.

It appears altogether improbable that the owner of any farm outside of New England can trace as far back into the distant past ownership by pioneer forbears of the present owner. In Virginia, where a permanent settlement was made 13 years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, the lands were held by corporate interests in England until after New England was settled.

PURELY A BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

Unlike the Plymouth settlement, which was established by the Pilgrim Fathers as a refuge from religious restraint, and which had a precarious existence, with pestilence and starvation threatening, and with hostile Indians to contend with during its early years, the Dover settlement was singularly free from such handicaps up to the time the Indian wars started in 1675.

It was begun purely as a business enterprise by Englishmen, who had visions of amassing wealth through direct contact with this newly discovered land of great resources, which had already been found exceedingly rich in fisheries, in timber for shipbuilding and land for planting, and inhabited by friendly Indians with whom profitable trade was anticipated.

Capt. John Smith in 1614 had found the waters along this part of the coast teeming with fish. Up the Piscataqua River too, he had sailed on his prospecting voyage. He was a promoter of the fishing industry at the Isles of Shoals and along the New Hampshire coast, which flourished before the main land was settled.

David Thomson of Thomsons Island, Boston Harbor, had been over here early in, or before 1622, and set up salmon fishing stages on the Piscataqua at a point of land in Dover territory where the Cocheco River joins it, and later that year had secured a patent upon it from the Council of Plymouth, England, which he had been serving as confidential agent.

ENTER DAVID THOMSON

Three months after obtaining his grant of the point, ever since known as Thomsons Point, Thomson secured another grant from the Plymouth Council of 6000 acres of land and an island, in New England. Why he applied for an island, undefined and unlocated, as a part of his grant, has puzzled historical writers, but the explanation is found in a deposition made by William Trevour in 1650 concerning the island in question in Boston Harbor, which was originally called Trevours Island.

According to the deposition, which was made in connection with a suit against the Massachusetts Bay Colony by Thomson's son John, to establish his title to the island, Trevour had taken possession of the island in 1619, and two years later had bargained it to David Thomson in London. On the strength of that bargain Thomson had included the island in his application for a 6000 acre grant. Thomson lived on the island the last three years of his life, dying there in 1628.

These references to David Thomson are pertinent since he was the prime mover in the enterprise which resulted in the establishment of the Dover colony by the Hiltons, Thomas Roberts and their associates.

Through an indenture signed Dec. 14, 1622 by him and three wealthy merchants of Plymouth, Abram Collmer, Nicholas Sherwill, and Leonard Pomery (later spelled Pomeroy) the four undertook to start a settlement on Thomson's 6000 acre grant, establish fisheries then one of England's most important industries, engage in trade with England and her colonies and develop plantations. Shipbuilding also offered great possibilities.

This was the first act in the exploitation of the region north of Massachusetts, which a decade later became a land boom of considerable magnitude, a colonization project, under the direction of Lords Say and Brooke, with Capt. Thomas Wiggin as their colonizing agent. Up to that time, the settlers by the terms of the Thomson Indenture were just enough to execute the projects named in it.

AN EARLY ROMANCE

The indenture provided for the landing of only seven men besides Thomson at the beginning. Two of the seven came over in the ship Jonathan of Plymouth, with Thomson. They landed at Little Harbor, near the mouth of the Piscataqua, a place called by the Indians panna-way, where Thomson lived until in 1626 he retired to his island in Boston Harbor.

The other five men including the Hiltons and Roberts came over afterwards in the ship Providence of Plymouth, owned by Pomery, and landed in Pomerys Cove at Dover Point, called at the beginning Hilton Point.

The fourth article of the Thomson Indenture provided that before the end of five years after the first landing there should be an allotment of 600 acres of land around the buildings of the settlement, which with the buildings should be divided equally between the parties. It was from this allotment that Thomas Roberts obtained his farm.

Romance played an important role in Roberts securing one of the choicest locations, apart from Edward Hilton's for his plantation. In 1627 Roberts married Rebecca Hilton, a sister of Edward and William Hilton.

The Hilton Brothers were members of the aristocratic Fishmongers' Guild of London when Thomas Roberts, according to the guild's archives, became apprenticed to it in 1622. The friendship then formed between the three young men, led them to associate themselves with David Thomson's New England enterprise. Roberts and Edward Hilton were of nearly the same age, each slightly past his majority.

William was five years older and married. He had come over to Plymouth in 1621, but had returned to England the following year. It was, therefore, natural that Edward Hilton, who had been made the head of the settlement by Pomery, should give his brother-in-law first choice for his farm of approximately 150 acres. Roberts selected high ground on Dover Neck about two and one half miles above Hilton Point.

William Hilton was evidently not interested in Roberts' selection, as he had settled on an Indian corn field on the opposite side of the river, now Eliot, Me. But William fared ill, for he was dispossessed of his corn field and his house destroyed in June 1633 by Capt. Walter Neal, Governor of Capt. John Mason's Strawberry Bank (Portsmouth) settlement, who set up the claim that the land where Hilton settled belonged to Mason under a grant to Mason by the Plymouth Council.

Hilton, however, recovered judgment for damages in court against Mrs. Mason 20 years later. But for that episode, Thomas Roberts might not have fared so well in picking his plantation.

The Roberts farm was laid out along the bank of the Piscataqua, or Fore Back River, as it is commonly called, to distinguish it from the Bellamy or Black River. To this was added a substantial tract on Back River by grant of the town in the middle of the 17th century.

When Capt. Wiggin came with thirty or more colonists in 1633 under the provisions of the Lords Say and Brooke colonization patent, the colonists took land adjoining the Roberts farm, which Hilton and his associates had sold to the English promoters.

ANCIENT OAK THE BOUNDARY

Thomas Roberts had two sons, John and Thomas. The four children who followed them were all daughters. Equally between his sons, about 1660, Roberts divided his farm, John receiving the southern half and Thomas the Northern. On the division line, about 200 yards from the Piscataqua stood a great white oak, monarch of the primeval forest that covered this region. This oak, now in the last stages of dying, has from that time been known as the "Bound Oak."

The tree was old when Columbus came on his voyage of discovery. Its buttressed trunk, measures 23 feet 8 inches in circumference one foot from the ground. A few years ago its great top had a spread of 78 feet. Its height was about 60 feet.

Thomas Roberts Sr. built his house on the high bank of the river about 150 yards northeast of the Bound Oak. The land was on that part of the farm which he afterwards gave to his son Thomas. The cellar excavation is still well defined and the site has been marked by a granite

Immediately after his marriage Roberts lived in a house at the Point near the Hiltons. It was not until sometime in the following decade, after his farm had been partially cleared of timber, that he began the erection of the Dover Neck dwelling.

LAST OF EARLY GOVERNORS

In 1640 Thomas Roberts succeeded Capt. John Underhill as the fourth Governor of the Dover Colony. Roberts served until the Massachusetts Bay Colony achieved its ambition of annexing in 1642, the Piscataqua River settlements, Dover, Strawberry Bank and Exeter, also Hampton, and making them a part of Norfolk County.

He had a leading part in the formation and establishment in 1640, of "The Dover Combination," an improved scheme of local self-government. He was one of 21 of the 42 signers of the Combination agreement in 1641, a protest against annexation to Massachusetts.

Governor Roberts was not of Puritanic mold. He possessed a liberality of thought which led him 20 years later to embrace the teachings of the Quaker missionaries who had come here early in the '60s, and secured a following from among the Orthodox Church people, only to be driven out of Dover in midwinter under harrowing conditions in accordance with Massachusetts laws against Quakers.

While he sympathized with the missionaries and was fined by being deprived of his cow for attending their meetings and staying away from public worship, his two sons, John and Thomas, both constables, zealously executed their appointed part of Massachusetts' order expelling the missionaries from its jurisdiction.

THE FATE OF THE QUAKERS

The missionaries, Anne Coleman, Mary Tompkins and Alice Ambrose, were led out of Dover Dec. 22, 1662 with ropes to the tail of an ox cart. According to the warrant issued by Maj. Richard Walderne, the women were stripped to their waists and whipped on their naked backs "not exceeding 10 stripes apiece" as they passed from one town's jurisdiction to another.

This process of expulsion was repeated until the Merimac River was reached at Salisbury, where Maj. Pike in pity forbade further whipping and arranged with Dr. Walter Barefoot of Dover, a sympathizer, who had accompanied them all the way, to take charge of them and get them out of Massachusetts' jurisdiction. The doctor took them in a boat to Kittery, Me. and to the home of another sympathizer, Maj. Nicholas Shapleigh. Recuperating there from their ordeal, these missionary women returned to Dover and resumed their preaching. They were not again driven from town, but constable Roberts, who, a contemporary Quaker writer declared, had administered to the women 11 strips for good measure instead of 10, undertook a project of some of the more illiberal members of the community, that of taking the missionaries down river and out of Dover, bound in an Indian dugout.

According to the Quaker narrative, the women were taken from a house and were dragged through the deep snow to the river. Alice Ambrose was plunged into the icy water and made to swim beside the boat to escape drowning. A sudden storm rising prevented this attempt to rid the community of the women from succeeding.

Quakers eventually became numerous in Dover and established a church and the Roberts family down through the generations have been divided between the Quaker and Orthodox faiths.

BY A NEVER FAILING SPRING

After New Hampshire was cut off from Massachusetts and became a separate province in 1679, John Roberts, the elder son, received royal appointment as marshal of the province. He was commonly called Sergt. Roberts.

His house stood near the river on his half of the original farm, and close by a never failing spring.

Overshadowing the spring stands a giant elm which was planted there while the house was being conducted as an inn by Mr. Robert's grandson Stephen. The tree is to-day 15 feet 9 inches in circumference six feet above the ground, and though more than two centuries old shows no sign of decay.

The oldest dwelling extant on the original Roberts farm is the handsome colonial house on the John Roberts section, known for many years as the Hanson Roberts house, as Hanson Roberts, grandfather of the proprietor of what remains of the Roberts acres in the family name, was born in it in 1793.

The house was built about 1775 by Hanson's father, Joseph, fifth in descent from Governor Roberts. It passed from the Roberts family possession in 1912.

The present Roberts land holdings include about one third of the original farm, portions of which have been sold from time to time. Fred Roberts, a descendent of Sergt. John. owns the famous Bound Oak and more than forty acres south of it. It was the farm of his father, Howard Millett Roberts, who left two sons, the younger being Stephen W.

Fred, who has devoted his energies for many years to apple culture on a large scale, added to his ancestral farm a 20 acre orchard tract on the opposite side of the State Highway, several years ago. After the death of their father, Stephen sold his interest in the farm to his brother.

That half of the original farm, which was given by Governor Roberts to his younger son Thomas, came into the possession of William M. Courser, a farmer of Dover Neck, in 1912.

From the earliest times the Roberts family has been intimately associated with the progress of Dover. It was Governor Roberts who was the first to turn the soil of New Hampshire with a plow. He was taught by the Indians how to raise Indian corn and to fertilize the hills with alewives, which swarmed up the river in the spring. A tannery on the Roberts farm was one of the first established here. Brickmaking, which came later, was conducted by Roberts descendants.

The ancient burying ground, in which all the first settlers were buried, occupies a niche taken from the Roberts farm close by the highway. The graves are mostly unmarked, but that of Governor Roberts is marked with a slate headstone suitably inscribed, placed there about 25 years ago to replace the original. Governor Roberts died in 1674.

W. H. W. Benedict.

Note:—Fred H. Roberts died Oct. 7, 1928. His Brother, Stephen had the use of the place from that time until his death July 26, 1930.

On Oct. 31, 1931 the place was bought at public auction by Alvah E. Roberts (Wendel P.⁹, William⁸, Love⁷, Love⁶, Love⁵, Love⁴, Thomas³, John², Thomas¹) who was living on it in January 1940.

ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF GOV. THOMAS ROBERTS OF DOVER.

In Mackensie's book Colonial Families of the United States, Vol. II, p. 619 is given the genealogy of the Roberts family in England, and the family is traced back to A.D. 1482, ten years before Columbus discovered America. Among the descendants is given Sir Thomas Roberts of Glassenburg, b. A.D. 1560, buried Feb. 20, 1627. Knighted July 23, 1603; created a Baronet July 3, 1620; Sheriff of Kent 1623.

He married Frances, daughter of Martin James Esq. of Imarden.

She died Feb. 1648.

CHILDREN:

1. Sir Walter.
2. Thomas.
3. Francis.
4. William, who emigrated to Maryland.
5. John.
6. Elizabeth.
7. Ann.

The second son Thomas emigrated somewhere, and those who have investigated the matter think that there is a strong probability that he is the Thomas Roberts who came over and helped colonize Dover.

There is no proof positive, but a strong probability that Gov. Thomas Roberts of Hilton Point, was the second son of Sir Thomas Roberts of Glassenburgh, England.—(Dover History)

Dover History further states that Thomas Roberts was the son of Thomas Roberts of Wolaston County, Worcester, and sailed for America April 29, 1624.

N. E. H. G. R., Vol. 28, p. 250 gives under Voyage of Edward Brawnde to Kennebec and Cape Cod, Thomas Roberts, seaman.

The following from N.E.H.G.R. Vol. 7, p. 356.

"Thomas Roberts settled at Dover Neck, at a very early period; how early we have no certain knowledge but the uniform tradition of the family has stated that he settled at the Point in company with Edward and William Hilton in 1623. Land which he occupied has been preserved in the Roberts family in uninterrupted succession for two centuries. (Now over three centuries.)"

In 1638 the people of Dover chose Mr. Roberts President of the Court in place of John Underhill, whom they had expelled for his various crimes. He was elected to many minor offices in the town and received various grants of land at different times, though his possessions were said to have been comparatively small. He owned land on the East side of Dover Neck and also on the West side of Back River. Serrel in his history of the Quakers speaks of him as rebuking his sons Thomas and John, who were constables, for the excessive virulence with which they enforced the laws against the Quakers in 1662, and says that he had been a member of the church for more than twenty years, sustaining a good character.

He died between Sept. 27, 1673 and June 30, 1674, his will having the former date, and probated the latter. He gives the bulk of his property to Richard Rich, husband of his daughter Sarah, and various bequests to the three children below mentioned. He was buried in the northeast corner of the old burying ground on Dover Neck, where many of his descendents also lie."

N.E.H.G.R. Vol. 21, p. 139 speaks of Mr. Roberts as Governor of Dover.

In 1689 he was one of the commissioners from Dover to the convention which met at Portsmouth to confer about matters of government. He resided at Dover Neck and also owned land west of Back River as well as marsh adjoining the "Great Bay."

The first ten children are recorded in 1807 in the records of the town of Shapleigh.

Love Roberts set out for Kenebec River April 4, 1775 in company with Mark Tate. (Master Tate's Diary, N.E.H.G.R. 74-190).

Enlisted May 5, 1775 in Captain Ebenezer Sullivan's Company, Colonel James Scamman's 30th Regiment.

Pension Record N.E.H.G.R. 65-259.—"Love Roberts, aged 64 of Shapleigh, July 4, 1820, Private in Ebenezer Sullivans Company, Colonel James Scamman's Regt. Mass. Original declaration made April 1, 1818. Pension No. 12651, Reversed. Family, Anna, wife aged 58, Clarissa, Daughter aged 18."

The date given as the date of marriage of Love⁶ and Anna Libby appears to be wrong, as the pension records state that he applied for a pension in 1818 and gave as dependent "wife Anna," unless his second wife was also named Anna.

Love Roberts settled at Shapleigh, Maine, where he held town offices, selectman etc.

Hannah, who married Wentworth Loud, had a daughter, Mary Loud, who married her first cousin, William Roberts, son of Love⁷ Roberts and brother of Loring True Roberts.

Hammond Genealogies* give date of Love Robert's birth as April 8, 1783.

"Captain Love Roberts was an extensive land owner and an active stirring man, prominent in military and civil affairs of the town. He was twice married, and had a family of six children.

The second place in the town, the owner of which made any pretensions to accommodate the travelling public, was that of Capt. Love Roberts, located at the cross-roads on Beech hill. — April 20, 1817, Gideon Southworth of Wayne, conveyed to Love Roberts the farm by his deed of warrantee. It is the impression of the writer that Capt. Roberts occupied this place as early as 1810, but did not obtain a clear title until 1817. The buildings were extensive and commodious. His barn was about one hundred feet long, with shed attachments the length of one side. This was often filled with stage horses and ox teams from the back country town, and his spacious yard with their loads. While he did not advertise to keep a public house nor obtained a license therefor, he did a very extensive business until his decease."—

Daniel True of Wayne and Elijah Barrell of Greene were appointed guardians of the minor children of Capt. Roberts and on May 1, and Sept. 24, 1831, conveyed the farm to Uriah H. Virgin.
